Democratic Party Credo Response

The United States of America has had one of the longest functioning societies in our world history and the Democratic Party has been a part of that timeline that has helped start the foundations of what a society should be like. After looking through the Credo, I feel as though that the most important of the statements is the one detailing a society that can provide "equal rights for women". This is an important issue in today's society as we try to take more strides towards gaining those rights for women and learning to understand that the times have changed truly and completely as we begin to see more females in leader roles and positions. I myself wish to become an activist as I begin the slow and difficult journey of becoming a female director in the film industry which is mostly known for the male-dominated roles. Long has the equal rights of women been overdue and a society needs balance between everyone so that citizens can have equal amounts of opportunity to succeed and live a happy life. These are the rights that I believe are true and the Democratic Party Credo reinstates this way of thinking through other statements that enforce civil rights for other minority groups and those who are not as privileged as others. To be able to live in a society where equal rights have been successfully gained for everyone is a society that is worth living in.
