

One of the goals of the Democratic Party Credo is to condemn and limit public and private discrimination, which is something that in line with my values. My parents immigrated to the US in 2005. They had two daughters and wanted the best for us, and so they uprooted their lives in search of the American Dream. Their American Dream was a life without discrimination and a life with opportunity. I'm thankful for their decision because it means that I get to be a part of a society that is continuously working to provide equal opportunity for everyone.

As an Indian American woman, I know first hand we don't have a society without public or private discrimination, but I do know that we are making as much progress as we can. From the 13th amendment to the 19th to the Equality Act, we are taking the steps we can to restrict the amount of discrimination that people have to face. As a current Democrat, I hope to be part of the movement to provide equal opportunity regardless of race, sex, etc.
